Katas.pdf - Free download as PDF File (.pdf) or read online for.Q: Name/Library of the story book about kids harvesting the memories of trees I remember reading this book several years ago, and it was definitely from the 90s. It was a bit of a mystery book, and it had a twist ending. A: That could be The Memory Catcher, by Keith Herd, 1997. Gerald is a 12-year-old boy who lives with his mother in a New York City apartment. He enjoys playing the trumpet, and he's very interested in all things about nature, particularly trees. One day, while doing some homework, he starts to worry that he's running out of room in his apartment, so he rushes to the local recycling center to see if he can find any boxes to use for a storage unit. However, when he arrives, he discovers something that greatly amazes him--the recycling center is actually a very large and very tall tree house. Inside, Gerald learns that the trees harvest memories by the way they make their leaves and branches move, and that he's not the only one who's lived inside the tree house. Now Gerald must help the trees hide their memories and find a way out of the tree house before they're discovered by the city's police. There's even an audiobook version. In addition, it's also discussed on
