I'm trying to define a custom bean configuration class. My bean definition looks like this: @Bean public BaseService baseService(@Value("${my.property.path}") String myPropertyPath) { return new BaseServiceImpl(); } Unfortunately this won't compile. I can't seem to find any information on the subject. I am aware that I could use @Value on a bean in my Application class like this: @Bean public BaseService baseService() { return new BaseServiceImpl(); } But this won't help me in this particular case, as it is not possible to reference the my.property.path in the Application class. How can I solve this? A: Instead of using @Value, use a @ValueSource annotation with a property you're defining in your configuration class. It would look like this: @ValueSource(value = "${my.property.path}", property = "myPropertyPath") @Bean public BaseService baseService() { return new BaseServiceImpl(); } You can find the documentation here: Acer Aspire C7 3850-6463 I have an Acer Aspire C7 3850-6463 notebook and I want to use it in the Ubuntu Operating System. But I do not know how to use Ubuntu with the Acer Aspire C7 3850-6463. Here are the things that I need help with: 1. How do I use Ubuntu with the Acer Aspire C7 3850-6463? 2. How do I connect
