It is based on the play Romance by Anurag Kashyap. It is the sequel to Aashiqui (2010), also directed by Suri, which was a commercial success. Aashiqui 2 features Emraan Hashmi and Shraddha Kapoor in lead roles, while Anil Kapoor, Paresh Rawal and Gajraj Rao appear in pivotal roles. There are six songs in the film, with the lyrics being written by Swanand Kirkire, Sajjad Sami and Raja Rao. The soundtrack was composed by Pritam Chakraborty. After the release of Aashiqui 2, Kashyap returned to the film industry as a writer. He said that he liked the script, but Kashyap and Suri had made Aashiqui in a similar genre and he felt that they may repeat their earlier work. Suri and Kashyap had both approached producer Mukesh Bhatt to make Aashiqui 2, but Bhatt was unable to fund the film. Bhatt then approached Filmfare, the production company of Kashyap, to help fund the film. On March 28, 2012, it was reported that Kashyap was on the verge of financing Aashiqui 2, with Mukesh Bhatt and Karan Johar being the film's other co-producers. The cast and crew of the film started preparing in April 2012. The shooting began on May 13, 2012 and continued until July 2012, when it wrapped up. The film was released on December 21, 2013. Plot Gurukrip Singh is a successful businessman and the CEO of a pharmaceutical company called Race Tech. On the night of his wedding, it is discovered that Gurukrip is actually an ex-convict, having served a jail sentence for killing a man. Gaitonde plans to get his revenge by killing Gurukrip. He gives this mission to his nephew, Pappu, who succeeds in killing Gurukrip and framing him for murder. An in-law of Gurukrip, Vinod, who is an important character of the film, discovers that Gurukrip is still alive. Vinod goes to India and finds out that Gurukrip is actually in coma, due to head injuries suffered during his arrest. Vinod takes Gurukrip to his hometown, Bhilwara, where a local hospital is unable to find out what is wrong with him. Vinod then brings Guruk
