Parents' perspectives on their child's health. The objective of this study was to develop a conceptual framework on the parents' perspective on their child's health in a sample of Danish parents who had children aged 3 to 10 years. Data were collected by means of a postal questionnaire distributed to parents of preschool children and a convenience sample of parents of children attending day care centres. A total of 933 parents responded. The results showed that the parents considered their child's physical health to be considerably worse than their child's psychological and social health. They mainly evaluated the child's health as being either excellent or good, but some parents also considered the health of their child to be bad. Of the parents, one in four thought that their child's health status was fair 2d92ce491b
