A: Your data is not a valid UTF-8 in your html. You have a bunch of U+0000 (NUL) characters there somewhere. They show up like that in the browser by virtue of the fact that your default charset is windows-1251, which uses the C0 control characters U+0000, U+0001, and so on. You should either set the character set to UTF-8 everywhere (if possible) or else fix the characters you've got right away. You could do the first with a sed -r's/([0-9]{1,})([A-Z]{1,})([a-z]{1,})\b/\u0001\u0002\u0003/g' file.txt or similar command, and perhaps replace all the NULs with something a little more human-readable. If the column is encoded in UTF-16 (which it looks like it might be) you could try sed -r's/([0-9]{1,})([A-Z]{1,})([a-z]{1,})\b/\u0001\u0002\u0003/g' file.txt or similar command. Better would be to use perl, as your locale is probably set in the query, and that makes it much easier to handle. perl -pe's/([0-9]{1,})([A-Z]{1,})([a-z]{1,})\b/\u0001\u0002\u0003/g' file.txt Q: How to access MainActivity instance in the MySingleTopActivity class in Android?
