2:31 YouTube monetization for ads and subscriptions (as of 1/18/2020) Google is the new king of online video monetization. What's interesting about this channel: - The new features they're trying out (I think I'm using 7 out of 9) - Different aspects of monetization: some videos use Subscription Boxes, some use display and, up until recently, some videos used banner ads, which was removed. - A few different aspects of video creation and editing (composition, transitions, custom effects, music, etc) - How to deal with copyright strikes and how to use royalty free music. - Why to avoid using copyrighted music. - How to deal with channels that drop off on you (after a couple of months). - A general look at YouTube's new revenue structure. - Why some channels have better monetization than others. - Adblockers. - How to avoid them. - Why they are important and why you should care. - If you can do it, what other tips and tricks do you have to make money from YouTube? - What tools they use. - Why they use tools that are not available to the public. - The analytics and how to decipher them. - Why it is important to understand your audience. - How to find your audience if you don't understand it yet. - Advice about paid and unpaid advertising. - How to learn from the paid advertising. - Why you should learn from the unpaid advertising. - Why you should be careful about advertising on YouTube. - The importance of feedback. - Which videos have better and which videos have worse feedback. - Why it is important to improve your feedback. - Video lengths, lengths and lengths. - A few more things about feedback. - How to deal with negative comments. - How to deal with spam. - How to deal with spam and abuse on

YouTube. - Some of the spam rules that they have. - What is the relationship between AdSense and YouTube? - Do they share the same revenue or is there a slight credit (up to $6 million) to AdSense for each new AdSense user
