Pemphigus vulgaris (PV) is an autoimmune disease with a poorly understood pathogenesis. We have previously demonstrated a decreased CD4+ T cell alloreactivity in PV patients compared to healthy controls. In the present study, we investigated whether the abnormal CD4+ T cell alloreactivity was associated with autoantibody production, and whether it might also be related to disease severity and autoantibody profile. In the IFN-gamma ELISPOT assay, PV patients exhibited a significantly decreased CD4+ T cell alloreactivity when stimulated with CD4+ T cell clones from HLA-DRB1*0301+ healthy donors compared to that observed with CD4+ T cell clones from HLA-DRB1*0301- healthy donors. In contrast, PV patients' CD4+ T cells did not exhibit any significant difference in their alloreactivity when stimulated with the CD4+ T cell clones from HLA-DRB1*0301+ healthy donors compared to those from HLA-DRB1*0301- healthy donors. This trend was consistent with the IFN-gam 77a5ca646e
