1Scanxl Professional 350 License Keyrar.Re: netapp leiabin 11g From: Scott Solomon Date: Thu, 6 Dec 2002 09:26:04 -0800 I have used netapp leiabin, specifically version 11g. That version has a bug. When the system has many containers, in disk space partitioning mode, the leiabin driver cannot open the disk files until they all are assigned. So, in my case, about 50% of the time a Linux machine could not be rebooted as a result. I have tested this in situations when a disk is nearly full and there is more than enough space, so I suppose this could happen anywhere, but it seems common at full. I don't have any idea if this is the intended behavior and/or a bug. Maybe someone else can test this and shed some light. At my company we use a StorageMax disk array, and although they are probably larger than any typical commodity SAN with respect to storage capacity, the array has no problem at full. Anyway, I don't think there is anything wrong with leiabin 10 or earlier. Please let me know if this is the correct way to report a problem. Scott ----- Original

When you say "disk space partitioning mode" do you mean RAID-0 or > RAID-1?

Scanxl.scanxl standardÂ .Q: Setting the Content-Type of a WebResource.axd file I am trying to set the content-type of a WebResource.axd file to application/xml I know that for a normal.axd file one can use the contentType attribute like this But every time I try to download the XML file by accessing the resource via a HttpRequest in code like this HttpRequest request = (HttpRequest)WebRequest.Create(new Uri("myURI/WebResource.axd")); My getter: var content = request.GetResponse().GetResponseStream(); returns the content as "httpRequest not allowed" Why is that? A: HttpWebRequest.Create uses the URL provided as parameter, not the path of the actual webresource. So if you set the path to WebResource.axd in the configuration, the request will end up not finding the webresource at all. Use this instead:

HttpWebRequest request = (HttpWebRequest)WebRequest.Create( new Uri("myURI/mywebresource.axd"));

Make sure that your myURI/mywebresource.axd file contains the HTTP headers that you need. I recommend the Transfer-Encoding: chunked header.
