So, in the Mountain West region, the DM will sometimes create a dwarf, and say that they get a castle (for example, Durbin). When they die, if the castle-town of that region has enough money, will they raise a new dwarf? Like, will they pay enough to raise a new dwarf? Or does that dwarf stay dead forever? A: Roll a new character: what if my character's dead? I don't know the answer to this one, so I'm going to answer this according to the RAW on using a prestige class to create a new character (emphasis mine): When you create a character for a prestige class, you must select a level appropriate for it. You must also meet all the prerequisite requirements for that level. I am personally going to interpret this as "for free," that is, this prestige class is a 1st level prestige class, so you select a 1st level character, and you can't have a dead 1st level character, so if your 1st level character dies, you can make a new one. However, I don't think it's the only answer: the prestige classes give prestige bonuses, so when making a new character, for example, you could select a 10th level fighter as a fighter (or wizard, for example), which usually means 1 or more prestige classes at 9th level, and you'd have to ask the DM if you'd lose the prestige benefits you have from them just because you create a new character. The prestige classes, in general, should have taken your death into consideration and given you a nice prestige bonus, so you're probably fine. If you don't think you can select a 1st level prestige class, you can buy one, for example, but there may be
